Introduction to EAB's Morale Momentum Loop

Teacher morale is at an all-time low, causing disruptions in pandemic recovery initiatives, teacher absenteeism, and decreased quality in instruction. Districts' current investments to improve morale—such as expanding wellness programs and increasing teacher appreciation efforts—have not worked.

However, low teacher morale is not inevitable. EAB has uncovered outlier organizations across industries that dramatically improved employee morale despite challenging circumstances. Their success shared a common ingredient: all outlier organizations diagnosed the evolving needs of employees and then co-developed morale improvement solutions in collaboration with employees. EAB has distilled this process into the teacher morale momentum loop.

Breaking Down the Momentum Loop into Actions

Morale Momentum Loop Summary

Five Reasons Why the Momentum Loop Improves Morale

Diagnoses the root of morale issues rather than treating symptoms

Addresses 1-2 root issues at a time

Partners with teachers to design solutions

Provides agility to respond to any new or unforeseen disruptions to morale

Shifts focus from low morale to sustained investment in improved working conditions

Diagnose Causes

To successfully improve morale, district leaders must align their perceptions of teacher morale drivers with teachers' actual wants and needs. Most districts do not have a strong system in place that diagnoses the why behind low morale nor collects the information frequently enough. The pandemic has made it evident how often teachers' needs change even over the course of one school year.

The best way to use EAB’s morale momentum loop is to first Diagnose Causes of low morale in a district by collecting and analyzing quantitative data (quarterly) using EAB’s quantitative supporting resources. Then, collect qualitative input by scheduling follow-up conversations with teachers and summarize the key takeaways from those conversations to share with them.

Roadmap to Diagnosing Causes

Two Parts to Diagnosis: Quantitative Data and Qualitative Input

Diagnose Causes Project Plan

EAB has designed several supporting resources to help districts complete this step of the morale momentum loop. Districts should use the linked resources to collect both quantitative and qualitative information from teachers and choose an owner for each step to ensure these tasks are accomplished successfully.

Watch EAB's "Morale Momentum Loop 101: Step One Diagnose Causes" Webinar for a 30-minute overview on all the major steps required and supporting resources available to complete the 'Diagnose Causes' section of the Teacher Morale Momentum Loop.

EAB has designed several supporting resources to help districts complete this step of the morale momentum loop. Districts should use the linked resources to collect both quantitative and qualitative information from teachers and choose an owner for each step to ensure these tasks are accomplished successfully.

1) Be thoughtful and use judgement when deciding how much of the qualitative conversation results will be shared with the district leadership team.

Prioritize Threats

Once organizations diagnose the reasons behind low morale, too often their next step is to throw several possible remedies at the most common problems that teachers raise. As a result, leaders attempt more than they can realistically address, which undermines trust and does not effectively improve teacher morale.

Instead, school districts must Prioritize Threats to low morale by tackling one or two root-causes at a time based on potential impact on morale and the feasibility for the district to effectively act on that root cause. District and school leaders must also be mindful about consistently communicating feedback results, planned next steps, and rationale to teachers to keep them engaged and active participants in the momentum loop.

Threats Must Be...

Achievable

Commit to 1-2 prioritized threats at a time so districts can robustly and effectively address threats

Impactful

Select threats with the greatest likelihood to improve morale

Prioritization Must Be...

Efficient

Make decisions quickly for timely teacher communication

Consistent

Establish a repeatable decision-making process so teachers can understand decision rationale

Roadmap to Effectively Prioritize Threats

1

Schedule Leadership Decision Meeting

2

Synthesize Inputs to Assess Impact and Feasibility

3

Prioritize 1-2 Morale Threats to Address

4

Communicate Next Steps

Co-Design Solutions

The best organizations realize that top-down implementation of morale improvement strategies is usually ineffective. Grassroots efforts and strategies designed by teachers work better. However, most teachers (and leaders alike) do not have the time or bandwidth to produce their own morale-boosting solutions from scratch.

Districts must find ways to lower the participation barriers to solution development and instead work alongside teachers to Co-Design Solutions that address their most pressing morale threats and ensure lasting results.

Constantly Assess When and How to Get Teacher Input

Co-Design Solutions Project Plan

EAB has designed several supporting resources to help districts complete this step of the morale momentum loop. Districts should use the linked resources to begin workshopping and co-designing solutions specific to their district and choose an owner for each step to ensure these tasks are accomplished successfully.
